How to Use USDA Grades in Buying Food Home and Garden Bulletin No. 196

This bulletin explains USDA's grades on different foods and shows the shield-shaped marks to identify the various grades. Some of the foods most likely to carry these grades are beef, lamb, veal, butter, milk, cheese, eggs, fruits, and vegetables; such grading is voluntary and paid for by the packer or processor who requests it.

What's to Eat? And Other Questions Kids Ask About Food. (1979 YB) 144 p.

The book is designed and written especially for 9- to 12-year olds. It was produced as one of USDA's commitments honoring the International Year of the Child. Between the covers of the new Yearbook is a lively and authoritative story of food, from the earliest struggle to get enough to tomorrow's problems of supply. Colorful illustrations, jokes, quizzes, craft ideas and recipes help enliven and support the story.

This is a presentation about a modern corn and hog farm in Iowa. It shows how John Miller, his family, and his partner grow corn for food and are able to raise and sell 2,200 hogs a year. It also shows the care Miller takes to preserve his rich farmland for future generations.

This is the third in the "People on the Farm" series of slide sets and filmstrips.

People on the farm: Dairying. C-206.

Released 1977. 122 frames, slide set $29.50, filmstrip $20.50. Price includes cassette.

Shows how a modern dairy operates and the daily commitment and investment in time, money, land, cows, and equipment a family has to make to keep the milk flowing.

People on the Farm: Broiler Growers.

C-207. Released 1978. 138 frames. Slide set $30.00, filmstrip $20.50. Price includes cassette.

Traces the little more than 7-week cycle in which one-ounce, day-old baby chicks are transformed into 3 ¾-pound broilers. Contrasts the ways Maurice Layton and his family raise broilers as growers under contract with the way they run a small beef cattle operation, and shows how the broiler operation provides extra income.

FARMERS' BULLETINS

What You Can Do About Bovine Mastitis. (F 2253) 13 p.

Bovine mastitis is a very costly disease to dairymen. This slight revision tells some of the things one can do to reduce the incidence and severity of the disease. Adequate prevention and control of mastitis depends on knowing which cows have the disease. A dairyman can examine the milk of each cow with the aid of a strip cup, and at the same time examine the physical appearance of the udder and teats. The spread of the disease can be reduced by isolating mastitic cows from the rest of the herd, examining the dairy area, milking machines, milking practices, and prewashing cows before milking.

Constructing Simple Measuring Flumes for Irrigation Canals. (F 2268) 13 p.
$1.25.

Poor irrigation water management causes many serious water-supply and water-quality problems. Farmers and other water users are being encouraged to develop their own water management plans or improve existing ones. A major step in implementing any plan is measuring the amount of irrigation water applied. This new bulletin gives some flume design criteria, flume design procedures, flume construction, and gage construction and placement.

HOME AND GARDEN BULLETINS

Family Food Budgeting . . . For Good Meals and Good Nutrition. (G 94) 15 p. $1.00.

This bulletin updates USDA family food plans at four levels of cost — thrifty, low cost, moderate cost, and liberal. These plans are guides for estimating food needs and costs to families. They take into account the nutrient content of foods, nutritional needs of individuals, and food prices.

Protecting Home-Cured Meat from Insects. (G 109) 6 p. $1.00.

This bulletin describes insects that commonly attack home-cured meat and tells how they may be controlled. The insects discussed are cheese skippers, mites, red-legged ham beetles, and larder beetles. The bulletin describes preventive measures that will control the insects and mites and lists precautions in the use of insecticides.

Poultry in Family Meals: A Guide for Consumers. (G 110) 36 p. $1.75.

Flavorful poultry has long been a bargain in good eating. Now it is even more popular because it is available in convenient sizes the year around. This revised edition is a guide to buying, storing, and cooking poultry. Included is a wide choice of recipes for main dishes, casseroles, salads, and soups.
